

Sydenham
Map #32 – Inglis Falls

The Trail between Harrison Park and Inglis Falls has been rerouted due to a dangerous erosion problem. At the south end of Harrison Park the Trail now continues across a bridge and then immediately turns left. The Trail follows a snowmobile trail uphill. Use caution on this section as this is a joint use trail with mountain bike traffic in the summer and snowmobiles in the winter. Near the top of the hill the trail turns left into the Grey Sauble Conservation Authority arboretum. This is a project of the GSCA to reforest this area with trees from around the world. The Trail continues past the GSCA administration office and then turns left and crosses the river over a new metal bridge. After a sharp right and then a left turn the Trail reconnects with the existing main Trail.
