Burnt Point Loop

Hike Length: 4.5 km

Section: Peninsula Bruce Trail Club

How to get there and Where To Park: As you approach Tobermory on highway 6, turn to the right at the signs leading you to the National Parks' Visitor Centre. There is ample parking at the Centre.

Description of the Hike: When visiting, be sure to leave time both for the Visitor Centre displays and its excellent film, and for a climb to the top of the Observation Tower with its views over the islands of Fathom Five National Marine Park.

The Burnt Point loop was built by volunteers of the Peninsula Bruce Trail Club for the opening of the Visitor Centre in 2006. Follow the white blazes of the main Bruce Trail for a short distance, and then turn left (north) towards Little Dunks Bay. Take time to view the bay from the viewing deck.

Then follow the blue-blazed loop through the old growth forest and across some boulder beaches before reaching Burnt Point where you can see panoramic views of the numerous islands in Georgian Bay. The smooth rocks of the Point are a perfect spot for a picnic. The route then returns you via an inland route of ridges and wetlands to the route back to the Visitor Centre.
